Investment-Specific Risks

Futures, CFDs, and Off-Exchange Transactions

Transactions in futures and CFDs involve significant risks due to leverage and market volatility. A small price movement can lead to substantial gains or losses. Our products are traded off-exchange (“OTC”), and Fiper Markets LLC acts as counterparty to all transactions.

Contracts for Difference (CFDs):

CFDs are leveraged products that can magnify profits or losses. You may lose more than your initial investment. CFDs are settled in cash and carry currency exchange risks.

Trading Conditions and Risks

Volatility and Market Liquidity:

Prices can move rapidly, especially during periods of high volatility. Insufficient funds may lead to automatic position closures.

Currency Risks:

Trading in markets other than your base currency involves currency exchange risks that affect your profits and losses.

Prices and Commissions:

Quoted prices may not reflect the broader market, and spreads may vary.

Suspension of Trading:

Markets may suspend trading during rapid price movements, which can prevent execution of stop-loss orders.

Margin Calls and Close-Outs:

If your account margin level falls below 100%, a margin call will appear. If it drops below 30%, positions may be automatically closed to reduce risk.

Client Money:

Client funds are held in segregated accounts, separate from Fiper Markets LLC's own funds, ensuring client protection.
